Chapter 1 by alice hardaker

"Change one thing, change everything. Step on a butterfly and an Earthquake that shouldn't have been will appear." That's what Gary was told before he used the time machine, a watch. His mad uncle Stephen created the watch, he used it several times, just to visit certain events in history. His favourite events to visit was the Berlin Wall coming down, The Beatles at Shea Stadium, Live Aid and the World Cup Final in 1966 amongst other things.

Gary just thought to himself I can do this though. Ok, it's a butterfly, but just one butterfly is ok isn't it? He just kept looking at the date, January 29 1933. The day before Hitler got made Chancellor. He had the gun he got before went back, he already knew what he was going to do before he went back. Stephen won't like it but he knew he HAD to do to save the deaths of millions and the misery it would bring.

He located him and after breaking down the door, cornered him and used his German translator that was built in to his watch and told him why he was going to die. "You're dying because you will become a monster. You deserve to die. I can't wait to kill you and see just how much better the world is without you ever being in it to commit the atrocities you did."

"But, I haven't done anything. How can you say such a thing when I haven't done anything?" Hitler replied in German that Gary's translator. Gary wasn't in the mood to talk, he was in the mood to kill. He pulled out his jacket and pulled the trigger. Gary had never killed before, it was easier than I thought.

he then shot him three more times to be sure he was dead. With that, he set his watch to return him to the present time, 5th March 2045.

With a puff of smoke, Gary returned to the present but, it wasn't the present he remembered. Everything had changed and what he found out shocked him to the core.
